Harvard, Princeton, Library of Congress, Springer, DFG, Federal Press Office, Leica...

This is just a small selection of the organizations we work with. We develop intelligent and market-leading software solutions that are used in large digitization projects and for press monitoring. Our customers include the world's most renowned and advanced companies and institutions, including media houses, research institutions, blue chip companies, federal ministries, and 14 national libraries.

For our location in Hamburg we are looking for a

Software Developer (m/f)

Your tasks
- You develop software modules according to the requirements of the project
- You design specifications for new features
- You work agile in the international Scrum team
- You solve the programming tasks in our diverse technologies from classic desktop applications in C++, server applications in C# with database connection to modern web applications and iOS/Android app development

What you can expect from us
- A very international customer base
- Exciting and meaningful projects
- Diverse and interesting tasks
- Small teams with low hierarchies
- The most beautiful city in Germany

Please send your application to jobs@content-conversion.com.
We at CCS look forward to getting to know you.

CCS